In a beautiful green forest, a little stream flowed peacefully among the trees.

A little elephant named Elly lived in this lovely forest.

Elly loved exploring, but she wished she could do something special.

Her friends were good at many things,
and Elly wondered what she could do.

One windy night, branches and leaves scattered all over the forest.

The next morning, Elly and her friends found their little stream blocked by fallen branches.

Benny pulled a thick branch, but it would not move.

Raja tried pulling another branch, but it was stuck too.

Even the little monkeys tried, but the tangled branches would not budge.

Suddenly, Elly noticed water trickling through a tiny gap between the branches.

Elly wondered if clearing the little twigs and leaves first would help.

Elly used her trunk to pick up the little twigs and place them on the bank.

Mimi saw Elly's clever idea and joined her to gather the leaves.

Soon, the two little monkeys joined in to move the smaller branches.

With the smaller pieces cleared away, Benny and Raja tried again, and the thick branch began to move!

Working together, Benny and Raja moved the thick branch onto the bank.

At last, the water flowed more freely through the stream.

Elly felt proud because her little idea had helped the whole forest!

Elly learned that being small did not stop her from doing something important.

All the friends celebrated their success and their teamwork.

The forest became peaceful again, and fresh water reached the plants along the stream.

Elly smiled at the little flowers, happy that her idea had helped the forest.

Her friends were proud of Elly and knew that everyone had something special to offer.

Elly learned that everyone has different strengths and even a small idea can make a big difference.

With the stream flowing freely again, Elly and her friends enjoyed a happy day together.

Together, the friends wandered through their beautiful forest, grateful to have one another.

You don't have to be big or strong to make a big difference.
Clever ideas and teamwork can do wonderful things!
